Maryland Nine Host To Springfield Today

University of Maryland will play its second ball game of the season by meeting Springfield college at College Park this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Jack England, a right-hander, or Luke Bromley, southpaw, will start against the nine from Massachusetts, and if either is "right" the visitors should have their troubles.

The Old Liners showed to good advantage in batting and fielding in their winning opening game with Richmond U. and should be improved for today's clash.

Springfield has been in this section for about a week and has been playing winning ball, two of its victims being Washington and Lee and Virginia.

After today Maryland will not play again until Saturday, when Loyola college will be met in Baltimore.
